Somewhere OUT there,
emerald waters guide you
to a collection of islands
where pink sands glow at sunset, where your soul leaps from every windy cliff into the warm, blue ocean below. And when you anchor away in a tiny island cove and know in your heart that you are its sole inhabitant, you have found your island. It happens quietly, suddenly,
out of the blue.

I found my island one day,
OUT of the blue.

OUT of the blue.

BIMINI

Fishermen love to tell stories about the one that got away... but out here in Bimini, most fishermen take home stories and photos of the big one they actually caught! Just 50 miles off the coast of Miami, Bimini is synonymous with deep sea fishing and the larger-than-life legend of Hemingway (a frequent adventurer in these waters). You're never a stranger very long on this fisherman's island full of friendly smiles and record-setting catches.

ACKLINS & CROOKED ISLAND

Miles and miles of glassy water never deeper than your knees make the bonefishermen smile. There's nothing out here but a handful of bone-fishing lodges, shallow waters and still undeveloped wilderness. Endless blue vistas and flocks of flaming-pink flamingos are the well kept secrets of these two peculiar little islands, separated only by a narrow passage called "The Going Through."

Something Borrowed, Something Blue.

A wedding in the Out Islands of the Bahamas is a wedding you will always remember. Setting the stage for a yearly remembering of the day two became one on pink sand, surrounded by storybook towns and your closest friends. Everyone swept up in a gentle breeze and the magic of the setting Caribbean sun.

Getting married on one of our undiscovered islands (not far off the Florida coast) has never been easier. Couples must be in the Bahamas only 24 hours before applying for a marriage certificate. For more information or assistance planning your wedding, contact your preferred hotel directly.

OUT of the ordinary.

THE ABACOS

The Abacos charm you the minute you lay eyes on postcard pretty Hope Town, with its collection of quaint New England style cottages bathed in springtime colors. A candy-striped lighthouse warmly greets island hoppers and sailors who delight in the islands' charming pubs and quirky island character (Marsh Harbour has only one stoplight)!

HARBOUR ISLAND

Pretty in pink... Harbour Island is hailed as the prettiest island in the Caribbean for its pink sand beaches. It's not unusual to see a mix of celebrities with their feet in the sand or enjoying the charming cottages and boutique hotels in picturesque Dunmore Town. You won't need more than a bicycle to see every inch of this extraordinary 3-mile peel.

CAT ISLAND

Clear waters for diving, shallows for bonefish and big Blue Holes for those brave enough to face mysterious creatures lurking in the depths. Cat Island is celebrated for its adventure as much for its dramatic cliffs, virgin beaches and its highest peak at Mount Alvernia. When you walk through the gothic ruins of The Hermitage at sunset and look out on the waters below, the modern world couldn't be farther away.

ANDROS

Home to the third largest barrier reef in the world, world-class divers and National Geographic folk fall in love with Andros for its shipwreck-filled harbors and extraordinary blue holes: bottomless, water filled caves in the middle of a primordial forest. Literally thousands of bonefish swarm the wadable flats and make for some of the best saltwater fly-fishing in the world.

BERRY ISLANDS

Not much more than a few freckles on a mariner's map, these sparsely populated cays are just what the doctor ordered for yachters looking to island hop, anchor away and disappear for a few days (or more). Endless secluded beaches, gin-clear flats and the gone before you notice shadow of bonefish are sure to be your only companions as you drift from cay to cay.

OUT of this world.

LONG ISLAND

You might already know Long Island for the gorgeous geographic wonder that is Dean's Blue Hole. Tucked away in a cove of miraculous colors, it may just be the world's deepest blue hole, leading to the world's eighth largest underwater cavern. There's a record there somewhere. But for all it's fame and natural eye candy, Long Island reserves its quaintness with small hotels sprinkled along an Island of beautiful ruins and beaches.

SAN SALVADOR

Some believe that Columbus didn't actually make his first landfall on San Salvador, but for locals that is only one side of the story. With over 40 dive sites within 30 minutes from shore, intrepid explorers continue to arrive seeking their own form of vacation treasure.

ELEUTHERA

Ask anyone: "What's the best thing to do in Eleuthera?" They'll tell you, "Chill out." You come to Eleuthera to get away from it all. If you're not here to dive the Devil's Backbone, an infamous sunken wreck, then you are here to watch the sands glow pink at sunset or to splash into warm waters from the windy cliffs above. You learn very quickly that natural wonders lie just on the other side of every rocky, unpaved road.

THE EXUMAS

At first, the thought of exploring 365 islands and cays can be overwhelming, but it won't be very long before you fall in love with the idea of anchoring away and getting lost in your own private nautical wilderness. Aside from the local wildlife, it's quite possible you'll be the island's only inhabitant. The Exumas are a yachter's paradise. Oh, and the swimming pigs — You won't believe it when you see them!
